There are many different ways to approach and explore the remaining 18th and 19th century plantations along the Mississippi River in New Orleans and Baton Rouge, ranging from sensory experiences to legends to highly academic architectural discourses. We strive to strike a balance which will appeal to sophisticated visitors and more to explore the area in depth, as well as to those who want to get a brief sense of these remarkable places. We provide accurate facts and statistics, as well as frank subjective opinions from a 7th-generation New Orleans resident.
